"I met Aashray when I had lost all hope," said Raja, who we met under an isolated flyover in Old Delhi. On our routine field visits, we found him with a critical disease and wounds on his leg. He shared that he had been taking treatment from a government hospital, and they had advised amputating his leg. Scared of the surgery and having no one to take care of, he suffered alone. This is when our Mr Sajjan Lal became his primary caregiver and supported him through health, shelter, and food. He took him to the AAA health clinic for 2 months and simultaneously provided psychological support too. With the care and love offered by him, Raja and his wounds started improving drastically. Today he walks, runs, and works independently as a caterer. He proudly shares "I am grateful to Aashray for saving my leg and protecting me for years of disability. I will dedicate my life to hard work and honestly in their name of you now".
